Review:

Almost drowning in a lake should be the scariest thing that happens to Tyrell but it's not. With his dad in the hospital, it's just him and his mom home. Even though he hasn't gone to school in a couple of days, he still has an essay to write. He is researching a fire that happened in the abandoned factory next door. One night, he is having trouble getting to sleep when he sees a light flashing the S.O.S. signal. He forgets about it but the next day, as he's falling asleep, he sees a girl sitting at his desk and she's trying to tell him something. Could it be the girl that was calling for help? Tyrell must find out, but after getting caught for trespassing once, he seeks help from Miss Schneider, the lady who owns the factory. Will she believe his ghost story or will she assist him in his journey?
